It is customary to speak of Catarrh as nothing more serious than a bad cold, a simple inflammation of the nose and throat. It is, in fact, a complicated and very dangerous disease; if not it fact, it very dangerous disease; if not at first, it very soon becomes so.

INTERESTS OF THE WEST. His Hot Wave Theory.

Special Correspondence. Boise, Idaho, Sept. 20.-In an article Mr. E. B. Dunn, formerly an official of the U.S. weather bureau, published in the Washington Star of Sept. 7, 1901, the interests of the entire west are attheory that irrigation in the west is the cause of the phenomena known as heat cause of the phenomena known as heat waves, and on this account the benefits of Irrigation are more than outweighed by the evils resulting therefrom.

The chief of the weather bureau and his entire professional staff, having examined this article, have singly and collectively condemned the theory as absurd, unsound and as calculated to injure the sub-arid west, if accepted.

The author states that the heat waves

(low pressure areas) that develop over (low pressure areas) that develop over the plateau region of the Rocky Moun-tains lack moisture, consequently, move more slowly than other low pressure areas and subject the people, stock and crops in the eastern states to a pro-longed period of intense heat. If such be true, then the addition of moisture through irrigation would tend to quick en the movement of the heat waves, and rrigation in the west be a benefit to the people of the east rather than an evil, since the heat waves receiving moisture would move rapidly and shorten the duration of the heat period. The efforts of the author to conve the impression that heat waves that linger over the plateau region are the result of irrigation must fail, since the records of the weather bureau extend ing back to the time when irrigation was not in general practice in the wes prove that heat waves have ever veloped in the plateau region and drift ed eastward, much after the fashion of those of the past season. Furthermore, they are likely to go on developing in the future as in the past without al-teration. Man's attempts to change nature's plan as to climate are puny and profitless. It is my impression that the generally accepted theory that irrigation has tendency to temper the climate and make it more habitable through increased evidence of husbandry is true No material climatic change is likely to take place in the west through irrigation, and certainly no amount o moisture distributed over the west wi affect the climate of the east in the least.
